Editor:

Hooray for your eloquent opposition to Proposition 64 (Editorial of October 15, 1986). Not only would the cost of implementing the LaRouche initiative bankrupt the state, but the isolation or quarantining of people with AIDS (PWA's) or AIDS-related complex (ARC) would be a cruel and ineffective measure that would only punish PWA's, their friends and families.

Now that the nation's blood supply is safe, there are only two ways to transmit the AIDS virus: (1) the sharing of needles and syringes among drug users, and (2) unprotected sexual intercourse. The LaRouche initiative would not stop either one. A well coordinated, massive public education campaign has a much better chance of altering those risky behaviors.

Sincerely,

Jess Jessop
